Dr. Helen Roseveare, affectionately called "Mama Luka," was a medical pioneer in what is now the Republic of the Congo. Her life and ministry there is an almost legendary story of 20th-century heroism. In the early 1960s, the country was ravaged by the Simba Rebellion. Helen, caught up in the horrors of that upheaval, was beaten, raped and imprisoned by the rebels. This video tells that story but before it gets to that point, it also has a lot of great footage about relationships between the Africans and Dr. Roseveare.
