

Missions Strategies

Date

Your Name

“At the end of slavery”

International Justice Mission video

A 31-minute documentary that goes inside the ugly business of buying and selling human beings, from the brothels of the Philippines to the brick kilns of India. It shows that the enduring features of slavery throughout the ages have been violence, deception, and exploitation of labor and lives. Paradoxically, “At the End of Slavery” is a remarkably optimistic film. IJM president Gary Haugen describes moments in history that are a “tipping point,” and says, “We are closer than we know.”

Key ideas, words or phrases

What struck me most . . .