Course Description

Introduction to the world’s major religious systems: Hinduism, Buddhism, Confucianism, Taoism, Judaism, Islam, Animism and even some segments of Christianity. We will investigate these religions from several perspectives, including historical (beginnings and development), phenomenological (beliefs, rituals, practices), and comparative (similarities and differences). The course will utilize a combination of discussions, lectures, films, field trips and special speakers.

Texts

The Illustrated World Religions by Huston Smith

Can Evangelicals Learn from World Religions? by Gerald McDermott

Course objectives

Upon completion of this course, a student should be able to:

1. Articulate with sympathetic understanding the dimensions of several major religious worldviews: history, geographical areas of influence, ritual practices, doctrinal beliefs, ethics, expected experiences
2. Describe the function of religion in sociological categories
3. Describe and interpret the relationship between the religious aspects of a culture and individual behavior
4. Describe the experiences of various religious groups as expressed in literature, art and music

How do I pass this course?

1. Attendance. Come to class. Three tardies count as one absence.

2. Textbook reading. Complete the reading and post in Moodle a minimum of 150 words of reflection plus two sample test questions over that material. Reflections coming in late will receive half credit.

3. Response posts in Moodle. Each week, submit answers in a “reply” post to two of your classmates “test questions” in Moodle. The questions you answer do not have to have been posed by the same person. However, they must be questions that no one else has yet answered. Thus, each question in the textbook reading responses will have only one “reply” answer to it. Due Sunday evening although these can be posted earlier.

4. Field trips. A big part of this class will be field trips to temples, mosques and synagogues. We’ll take as many as eight of those during the semester. We’ll go on Fridays when we have that scheduled “lab” time as a buffer time. We’ll try to spend a full hour at each destination.

5. Exams. There will be two exams. Study guides will be provided ahead of time to maximize your learning experience.

6. Temple/Synagogue/Mosque visit. On your own, visit a religious service of one of the traditions studied in this class. Your visit must be to an actual service or meeting. Just visiting the building they use will not be enough. Report on that visit with a 500-750 word observation paper. Up to 40 pts extra credit can be obtained by making an additional visit to a different religious organization’s service and writing a paper on that second experience. (Note: these visits are in addition to the field trips taken by the entire class).

Fortunately, we have great resources for this course in the Oklahoma City area:

7. “My conversion to Christianity from . . . .” Assume that you a following of a religion other than Christianity and that your spiritual journey let you to convert to Christianity and to embrace Jesus as Savior and Lord. Describe that journey. What caused you be curious about Christianity. What things did the Holy Spirit use to draw you toward a decision to make a paradigm shift? The final page of your paper should be a bibliography of sources consulted.

8. Seminar handouts. Prepare “seminar handouts” for three religions. Use your textbook as well as other sources. All sources used in the paper must be properly cited. Direct quotes must be enclosed in quotation marks and the source properly identified. Bring a print-out to class on the due date as well as uploading the file to Moodle.

Include with your handout a separate bibliography page of sources consulted. In alphabetical order, give the full name of each author (surname first, then first name) followed by the title of the work. Book and journal titles should be italicized or underlined. Article titles should be in quotation marks. Place and date of publication should be included (date only in case of journals). Internet sources should be properly cited.

Here are some questions to get you started:

- What is the history of this religion?
- Where is it found and how many adherents does it have?
- What are the most important sacred stories of this religion?
- What are some of its beliefs about God, spirits, human nature, how the world came to be, what is it that humans should strive for (is it soteriological, for example)?
What rituals are important in it?
Is there a priesthood or ecclesiastical hierarchy?
Is there a creed its adherents subscribe to?
What ethical ideals does it promote?
What major artifacts, architectural monuments, art work has it produced?
Is there more than one sect, version or denomination?
What do you think your seminar audience will most interesting about this religion?

9. Video / speaker feedback. Through the semester we will view some videotapes as a class and have some special speakers. Each time we have a videotape or a special speaker you need to turn in a written response on the form that will be provided. If you miss a class in which a video is shown you can get the response form from my web site, see the film on your own and get credit as though you were in class.

10. Graduate students. Students taking the course for graduate credit will be asked to do some reading in source documents of Islam, Buddhism and one other religion of their choice. They will do both oral and written reports on their reading (more details in a separate handout).

Housekeeping note

Your mother does not clean our building. If you bring a soft drink or coffee to class, handle it carefully and clean up any spills. Do not leave cans, cups or other trash in or around your seat.

Where to begin your research

As you work on your written paper and group presentations, do not rely on your textbook and the Internet alone, although there is lots of material in both those places.

Some journal and periodical article suggestions

Here are a few of the books in the SNU library. There are many more on various world religions
