March 17 shouldn't be about green beer and leprechauns! It's a story about a former slave going back to his captors as a missionary and winning them to Christ.

Boniface

Chopping down the sacred oak tree of the pagan Germanic tribes was “a master stroke of missionary strategy”

Francis of Assisi

In the middle of the Crusades' period, Francis visited the Sultan of Egypt and heard him say: “If I would meet more Christians like you, I would be tempted to become one.”

Ramon Lull

Wealthy Spanish nobleman who spent his family fortune to train missionaries for Muslim north Africa; he was reportedly killed by a mob in Tunisia

William Carey

A church leader said to him: “Young man, sit down. If God chooses to save the heathen, He will do so without your help or mine.”

Hudson Taylor

Passionately urged the church to “contextualize” its mission ministry in China and to go to the unreached inland areas
